Remembering Camp

On cold wet days...

My feet remember standing in cold wet water in the the cave at Stubbs Farm.

My legs remember being sleepy while walking at Opapaka pa.

My body remembers feeling nervous when I was abseiling down the limestone cliff face.

My arms remember getting squished when I was going into the little cave at the Discovery Centre.

My hands remember touching the cold glass in the dark at the kiwi house.

My eyes remember looking at the very bright glow-worms on the banks of the Rauakuri walk.

My mind remembers that camp will be back soon.

Remembering Camp

On hot sunny days...

My feet remember dancing at the disco night in the whare kai.

My legs remember being tired after our long walk up opapaka pa.

My body remembers rolling down the hill into the kumara pits.

My arms remember getting tired while abseiling down the high cliff.

My hands remember getting stabbed by the prickles.

My eyes remember looking at the glow worms like they were stars in the sky. My mind remembers that camp will be back again soon.

Remembering Camp

On sunny days...

My feet remembers walking up to the kumara pits at Opapaka Pa.

My legs remember feeling cold water in the damp caves.

My body remembers trying to roll down into the kumara pits.

My arms remember having hot showers.

My hands remember feeling a fossil at the Discovery Centre.

My eyes remember seeing my friends nearly slip in the mud.

My mind remembers that camp will back again soon.

Remembering Camp

On long sunny days...

My feet remember standing on prickles at Rereamanu marae.

My legs remember walking a long way up to Opapaka Pa.

My body remembers rolling down hills into the kumara pits at Opapaka Pa.

My arms remember scraping against the branches at the Ruakuri walk.

My hands remember being cold because of the cold air in the cave at Stubbs farm.

My eyes remember watching my friends abseiling down the big cliff.

My mind remembers being nervous of the wetas hanging in the cave above us.
