Going for Gold!

There's a crowd shouting and screaming all around me, when they finally go quiet I can feel my heart pounding while I step onto the podium. I take a deep breath before I got given my well earned gold medal. It feels really heavy like a baby elephant hanging from my neck.

A shiny ribbon, a medal and my flag are all sharing and celebrating with me, the crowd and my family. While the flag goes up the I feel grateful as my national anthem plays. I hear the crowd roaring like a tiger celebrating its victory with me. There are eyes everywhere like a thousand eyes alien staring at me.

I sing the national anthem as it starts. The music is a blanket wrapping around me. When the New Zealand flag rises, flapping in its wings as if its joining in the celebration, sharing this unforgettable moment with me. Everyone is singing out national anthem.

As I looks around the celebrating crowd, happy teats run down my face and I will never forget this important moment. I block out the noise and it's just me, my flag, my medal and my dream that has finally come true.

Winning Gold!

There are heaps of eyes staring at me. I feel like I am in a zoo. I step up to the podium. It feels like time has frozen. All my hard work has been worth it. My moment has come. It doesn't feel real.

I lean forward and they put a medal around my neck. The crowd roars like a lion excited to share this moment with me. I feel proud when I hear the national anthem play. I see my flag watching over me like a proud and comforting friend.
